Indonesia Tsunami and Earthquake Relief

Two islands in Earthquake-prone Indonesia were hit especially hard last summer and fall. In late July into August 2018, at least five major earthquakes struck the Island of Lombok. Hundreds of people were killed and towns and villages were all but destroyed. Mercy-USA for Aid and Development has a permanent office in Indonesia with field teams ready to mobilize when natural disasters strike. We responded to the needs of the village of Kerta Raharja, where every home was destroyed and all the school buildings were flattened.

On September 28, a 7.4 magnitude earthquake and a Tsunami struck the island of Sulawesi, Indonesia. Again, we were ready to respond quickly with another field team that made their way to...continued on page 2 the affected area within just a couple days of the Tsunami despite the transportation infrastructure being completely disabled.

In October, Mercy-USA distributed ready to eat, hot cooked meals, twice a day to hundreds of disaster survivors. With no resources to cook or store food, these meals were vital to families living outside on the ground in makeshift tents.

We spoke to mothers like Rosdiana, at left, the wife of a poor fisherman. They lost everything in the Tsunami; it swept away their home and livelihood in just minutes. She told us our hot meals for her family were lifesaving as they had been surviving on instant noodles until we arrived. She said her children were getting weaker by the day until our relief team came with hot meals for everyone. This project also cared for the needs of the rescue volunteers who worked around the clock in recovering the victims of the disaster.

Mercy-USA also distributed a food basket of shelf-stable food to last a family one month as well as hygiene packages for adults and babies that included all that’s needed to stay clean and healthy while surviving in tough conditions.

In addition, Mercy-USA distributed tents to bring families out of the elements while providing dignity and privacy during such a difficult time.

The devastation from five powerful earthquakes in the space of three weeks on the island of Lombok destroyed most of the infrastructure in the affected area. Mercy-USA delivered hygiene kits and food baskets to families in the village of Kerta Raharja. We are also building semi-permanent housing for vulnerable families until the Indonesian government fulfills their vow to build permanent homes.

Rebuilding a Primary School

In Kerta Raharja, 5 to 7 year olds now attend informal school in a large tent that is only suitable when the weather is dry, which is not often in this tropical island location. Without classroom structure, washroom facilities and proper shelter, instruction is difficult. Mercy-USA is rebuilding the school and has already supplied the children with new uniforms, backpacks, work tables and supplies.
Thousands of Families in Syria Get Winter Warmth

More than 3 million displaced people are crowded into makeshift shelters and substandard buildings in northern Syria. Many have had to flee to a new location on more than one occasion, and this kind of instability increases the suffering and loss children and their families experience. One of the ways Mercy-USA has worked to alleviate the hardship is through our annual winterization program providing winter heat to families living in various types of uninsulated shelters, especially tent homes.

This winter, with help from a generous grant from the United Nations and Mercy-USA donors, we are delivering cast iron stoves and three months of eco-friendly fuel to thousands of families. This fuel burns hotter than scarce wood or coal, and is safer for the environment as well. The bio-mass fuel is manufactured in nearby Turkey as well as in Syria from olive oil production waste. The cast iron stoves are vented and sturdy so not to be easily tipped by children. This project will keep children and the elderly safe from the freezing nighttime temperatures, especially while surviving in tents.
Equalizing Back to School for Kids in Detroit and Bosnia

Every child’s first day of school should be one filled with the anticipation of learning new things and making friends. We found that the back to school season can be a stressful time for families who struggle to make ends meet. Every parent wants to send their children off to the first day of school with all that the school requires. However, for many parents the school supplies list means going without something else that month to accommodate the extra expense. Mercy-USA provided back to school backpacks loaded with school supplies for children at schools in Bosnia and Detroit.

For the second year, we sponsored backpacks and supplies for children in first grade at six schools in Bosnia. Children were outfitted with brand-new, colorful backpacks and the required school supplies. The distribution day was exciting for little ones about to begin first grade. Disadvantaged families brought their children in for a special day before school started so their kids could begin the first day proudly with a new backpack and supplies.

Inspired by the success of the program in Bosnia and our emphasis on education worldwide, we initiated the “We Care Backpacks” program for three Detroit public schools identified as having great need. Mercy-USA volunteers raised money, and assembled more than 400 backpacks filled with school supplies for children in kindergarten through 5th grade. We also distributed teacher care kits containing supplies like tissues, printer paper, dry erase markers and more. Teachers often spend from their own pockets to supply their classrooms with items needed to teach and maintain hygiene.

Parents were informed well ahead of the first day of school that their children would not need to bring a backpack or supplies, so children showed up on the first day full of excitement and anticipation. They were not disappointed!
